Participate in a national service project to fight hunger

More than 50 million adults, kids, and families in the United States are experiencing food insecurity. This number has increased since the COVID-19 pandemic and includes members of our own communities, friends and family, or members of our troops, making this an important take action issue for Girl Scouts. As they think about how to give back this holiday season, Girl Scouts can make a big difference in their communities—and for children around the world—by supporting hunger relief efforts.

- Support a food drive in your community or organize your own.
- Thank a Food Bank Hero. Write to a Food Bank Hero to show your troop's appreciation and send encouragement for the hard and vital work they do. Mail your handwritten notes to your local food bank.
- Volunteer at a food distribution program with a local food bank in your area.

Once you have completed this service project, remember to:

- Inspire others to give back and share your story with us! You may be featured on our blog or social channels.
- Complete a survey so your impact can be counted in our national service projects.
- To recognize your Girl Scout's participation with a patch, try this Girl Scouts Give Back patch.

Giving in a Box powered by Rose Community Foundation

Learning about Rose Community Foundation and community giving equips Girl Scouts with the understanding that they have the power to make a positive impact on their communities! Early exposure to philanthropy can inspire a lifelong commitment to helping others and addressing societal challenges. Philanthropy cultivates important skills such as collaboration, leadership, and financial literacy, which can all be translated into Girl Scout Highest Awards. By learning about community giving, Girl Scouts are empowered to become proactive, compassionate leaders of tomorrow.

This program is geared towards Juniors, Cadettes, Seniors, and Ambassadors and can be earned in tandem with a Highest Award project.
